If you have a permanent or temporary disability, illness and/or specific learning disability which could disadvantage you in demonstrating your knowledge, skills and understandings in timed assessments you may apply to sit the examinations under special arrangements.

The granting of special examination arrangements is not automatic, but depends on the provision of medical and/or psychological evidence to justify the decision.

Please contact the associate principal if you wish to be considered for special examination arrangements.

“The Rules”

What is unacceptable behaviour?

Any activity that allows one candidate to have an unfair advantage over other candidates is deemed to be unacceptable.

All work submitted must be your own. If your work includes material that is not your work, this must be acknowledged appropriately. Plagiarism could lead to an examination paper or practical mark being cancelled or having an examination mark reduced significantly.

What are the candidate's responsibilities?

Candidates must adhere to the instructions, as set out in this booklet, and any other instructions issued in the course of the examinations. Candidates must check the schedule for subjects and courses they study, and report any incorrect information immediately.

- Arrive before the examination commences. Candidates will NOT be admitted after 30 minutes has passed from the start of the work period of an examination, other than under exceptional circumstances and by express permission of the Associate Principal.
- Wear full school uniform, including jackets.
- Make immediate application for sickness or misadventure.

What needs to be taken into the examination?

- Your personalised examination timetable
- Pens, pencils, highlighters, rulers, erasers, correction fluid and other items specified or recommended for particular subjects/courses. These specified or recommended items are listed on the front cover of each exam paper and in the exam design brief in the syllabus. (See also Appendix D of the Year 12 Information Handbook. Items should be contained in a pencil case made of clear materials.
- Approved calculators in examinations which allow these. These must be used silently and must not contain any Aplet or program which transforms it into an unauthorised calculator.

- Any equipment must bear only the original inscribed information.
- Equipment must be carried only in clear containers.
- Drawing/measuring aids approved in some courses (e.g. Design, Mathematics, Geography, Outdoor Ed, Physics).

- Up to 2 A4 flat pages, which do not contain folds.
- May be written on both sides, but must not have any notes stuck to them.
- Must be left on student's desk at all times.
- If you attempt to bring more than the prescribed number of sheets, this will be a breach.

Can pencil be used?

Candidates should write clearly in pen or pencil. For multi-choice sections, you must use blue or black pen when recording your response on the relevant recording sheet. You may use either a pen or pencil in other sections of the examination, though blue or black pen is preferable. You are advised not to use erasable pens. Coloured pencils may also be used.

Mobile technology

Mobile telephones, tablets, smart watches and MP3/MP4/iPods/iPads/laptop computers should not be taken into an examination room. If due to a security risk they cannot be left outside the examination room, then they must be turned off and left at the front of the room. English unless otherwise specified.

What can candidates do during reading time?

Read. The purpose of reading time is for candidates to read all instructions on the paper, familiarise themselves with the questions and determine which questions they will attempt. All written papers have a reading time of ten minutes. Reading time is for reading only. No marking of the paper by pen, pencil, highlighter or any other items or the use of calculators is permitted.

Is communication permitted during the examination?

During the examination, no communication between candidates is permitted. This includes non-verbal communication. Candidates wishing to communicate with a supervisor should raise their hand to attract attention.

Candidates must check and recheck their exams. They must wait until released by the supervisor.

What happens at the end of an examination?

Candidates will be warned before the end of the examination and must stop writing immediately they are asked to do so by the supervisor. Candidates should not leave their desks until all papers in the room have been collected. They may then leave the room in an orderly fashion when directed by the supervisor.

Talking is not permitted in the examination room at any time. When candidates have been dismissed from the examination, they should move well clear of the examination room so as not to disturb other candidates who may be engaged in other examinations.

What happens if a candidate misses an examination?

- ☛ Possession of non-permitted items will result in: cancellation of whole or parts of a candidate's paper; a marks penalty.

An examination is an opportunity to demonstrate and showcase your learning. Being aware of the procedures and routines for the examinations will help you approach the experience well-prepared, with a positive focus.

It is appropriate to be somewhat 'stressed' and nervous about examinations, because this shows you care and it is important to you.

We aim to support you to develop the skills and techniques that help you to showcase your knowledge, skills and understandings.

These 'rules' are based on the School Curriculum and Standards Authority WACE external examinations rules.

These are outlined in the Year 12 Information Handbook, which is available:

<https://www.scsa.wa.edu.au/publications/year-12-information>

Examination Tips

Preparing for exams

The most important thing to remember is not to get stressed about the examinations. The exams are important but they are not the be-all and end-all. Remember that up to 50 per cent of your final mark comes from the work you have achieved throughout the year. It is important that you study in a calm, positive environment and sit the exams in a calm, positive frame of mind.

Planning and preparation, however, make a difference, so use your study time effectively.

- When studying you should:
 - do active reading—such as highlighting, underlining or circling words to develop a comprehensive set of study notes; don't just reread notes
 - seek help from your teacher if you don't understand something (ring them)
 - work with a partner or small group of friends to test your understanding.
- Don't just rely on the knowledge and skills you have learnt through completing class work and assignments throughout the year. Practise writing answers in limited time periods. You also need to practise tackling a wide range of questions in case you do not get asked the questions you expected. These materials (available at the School Curriculum and Standards Authority) can assist your revision program:
 - current syllabus outline for each subject—syllabus outlines describe the examination details and the knowledge that will be examined
 - past papers—they show the style/type of questions that have been asked in the past and you can practise writing answers in a set time
 - examiners' reports on each subject—these reports provide feedback, including comment on mistakes candidates made.
- You should lead a balanced lifestyle. This means:
 - taking short breaks from study at least every two hours
 - having reasonably early nights
 - eating a balanced diet
 - engaging in some physical exercise and social activities.

During the exam period

- Continue leading a balanced life: eat well, get some exercise and don't stay up late the night before an exam. On an exam day make sure you have a good breakfast. Foods that contain protein will help you maintain concentration for longer periods of time.
- Write out your personal exam timetable and stick it above your desk at home or on the fridge. (You'll have a feeling of satisfaction every time you cross off an exam.) Make sure you know the date and time of each exam and the venue. Check the timetable with your friends and then get someone else (like your parents) to check it.

- Before the exam period starts check that you have the materials you require, such as stationery, calculators, dictionaries and water bottle. Make sure that the battery in your calculator or graphics calculator is not about to expire.
- Arrive at the exam centre at least 15 minutes before an exam starts. Give yourself plenty of time to get there.
- Give yourself a positive pep talk before each exam and focus on your strengths. An alert mind is your best asset in any challenging situation.
- Use your reading time effectively to plan which questions you could answer, brainstorm information for your responses and order them logically so that your arguments are well-developed and make sense to the marker.
- Divide your time intelligently. Do not spend a lot of time answering a question that is worth five marks and then hardly any time answering a question worth 20 marks.
- Exam markers cannot guess your potential achievement. They have to judge your work according to marking guidelines. This means you have to demonstrate what you know and are able to do while you are sitting the exam paper.
- Make sure your writing is legible. Markers will not be able to decipher writing that is illegible, so you need to take care when you are under the added pressure of writing inside a time limit.
- Leave yourself ample time at the end of the exam for picking up any careless errors with calculations, spelling and grammar. Avoid racing to finish as the time draws to a close.

Tips for parents

- Have realistic expectations for your child.
- Be encouraging and supportive. Tell them to do the best they can.
- Encourage them to follow a comprehensive, committed study program.
- Provide a calm, positive atmosphere at home.
- If things go wrong on the morning of an exam (illness, accidents, emergencies etc), contact the school to advise them and make arrangements.
